In order to find this out, you would have to play a game hundreds, if not thousands of times, quantifying the amount of wins. That said, for every hundred spins that you analyze, the next hundred might yield completely different results, proving that slots are indeed random. On top of all that, it would take a ridiculous amount of time and effort to analyze the hit frequency yourself. If you are still curious about the hit frequency of a particular game, you may find some published results and statistics in online slots reviews.
